Students at a culinary arts school in Lancaster County are pitching in to help those affected by the Moore, Oklahoma tornado.

At the Pennsylvania School of Culinary Arts at YTI, Lancaster students are putting their talents to great use.

Hours upon hours of "baking" is literally about to pay off.

"After watching what happened last week in OK, the devastation to everyone's houses," explained Program Director and Chef Susan Notter, "I couldn't imagine what it would be like to emerge from something like that and not have anything."

Baked goods and other sweet treats are being sold between classes to other students at YTI. All proceeds are going directly to the Oklahoma Red Cross.

"We're going to write a check for the Red Cross we are asking donations," Notter addressed. "Each piece is two dollars, we've had people give $20."

If you can't make it out to YTI to donate, CBS 21 is also working to raise money for those affected by the tornadoes. To find out what that is, click on the attached link.
