

YTI to offer free dog obedience training

From staff reports | Posted: Saturday, March 31, 2012 9:00 am

Dog owners looking to train their household pets can register for free professional obedience training from YTI Career Institute-Capital Region.

The eight-session training starts Saturday, April 7 from 9 to 10 a.m. and will continue to Saturday, May 26. All eight classes are free and open to the public, though RSVP is required given limited class size.

The classes are intended for the average household dog and will be taught by Craig Stone, YTI's program director for Criminal Justice & First Response. In the classes, pet owners will learn basic obedience commands, house training, crate training, how to stop puppy biting behavior, how to manage separation anxiety and how to stop food aggression.

To RSVP, call Craig Stone at 620-0116 or visit www.yti.edu/admissions/events.asp. YTI is located at 401 E. Winding Hill Road in Mechanicsburg.
